Colorado does not provide a state credit for charitable donations. Nevertheless, claiming these contributions on your federal return can lower your federal taxable income, leading to a higher refund that you can then allocate toward future goals. If you meet the IRS home-office requirement, you may claim a simplified deduction: $5 per square foot, up to a maximum of 300 sq ft. The deduction is automatically applied at the federal level and translates into a smaller state tax base. Colorado does not match the federal child-care credit, but the federal credit itself can reduce your overall tax liability. Use the credit's "maximum" calculation to see if you qualify for up to $3,000 in expenses.
