penalties, align invoicing cycles, and maintain smooth relationships with the city's finance department. City payroll is processed on a semi-monthly basis, typically on the 15th and the last day of each month. When either of those days falls on a weekend or a city-observed holiday, the payment is advanced to the prior business day. This shifting pattern can catch vendors off-guard if they rely on static dates for invoicing or cash-management. Key takeaway: Align your billing schedule with the city's adjusted payroll days to secure timely payment and reduce accounts-receivable churn. Holiday or overtime surcharges-issued as separate runs when overtime thresholds are met. Year-end bonus distributions-usually processed in December, with a specific cutoff that the city announces early in the year.
