Current transits are the angles formed between moving planets and the positions of the natal chart. Each aspect—conjunction, square, trine, opposition, sextile—carries a distinct quality. For example, a Saturn square to the Sun often signals a period of testing limits, while a Jupiter trine to Mercury may bring expansive communication opportunities. Recognizing the planet involved and the house it touches adds depth to the interpretation. Overgeneralizing the effect — attributing a single planetary aspect to every area of life rather than considering house placement and chart context. Ignoring the orb — treating an exact aspect the same as one that is several degrees away, which changes the intensity and relevance.
